Chapter 1 by Lord Darkness Servant

My feet dangled off the edge of our forgotten colony, all I saw was clouds underneath my feet. A light breeze across my neck, tingled down my spine, released my energy with a deep sigh. The thought roamed around my head of " I wonder if anyone remembers the colony in the clouds down in Terra."

A faint whisper of a song my mother use to sing to me when I was a young child arose to my attention, but a voice that was not hers. I turn around to see if anyone was around, but not a soul was captured by my eyes. All there was to see was a river the lead to the edge of the colony and large trees that talk to me whenever I shown up at the right time and alone. Never have they told me if I was the only one, but one day I hope to see someone once again.

I decided to walk into the forest; one of the trees named Cornus reached out with one of his branches and grabbed me by the foot.

" Azulu, what brings you around here this time?" questioned Cornus.

" I heard a female singing to me, I decided to walk in here and see if i can find this mysterious woman." I replied

" Oh I see, love struck you are. A large forest you walking into, be careful, here take this fruit and a branch to walk with." Cornus broke a branch off so I may use it. " May the wind guide you, young Azulu."
